

Remote Work Study - Executive Report

1. Introduction

Remote work grew sharply after 2020. This report examines productivity, wellbeing and retention across 1,200 employees at 14 companies.

2. Findings

Productivity rose 13% among remote staff, driven mostly by fewer interruptions.

However, 41% of remote employees reported feeling isolated from colleagues, and promotion rates for fully remote staff were 8% lower than for office staff.

Retention improved: attrition fell from 22% to 14% after remote options were introduced.

3. Attrition by work model (see Figure 1)
